Urashima, the fisherman

A long time ago, on the coast of Japan, there lived a family of fisher named Kuzumi. The youngest boy was called Urashima. He was a kind boy and a clever fisherman.

One day he went out in his boat and threw out his line. He didn't catch any fish, but he caught a large tortoise. It had a large hard shell, an old-man face and a small tail. Its face looked old, but this tortoise was only young. Urashima knew that the tortoise was no older than he; and he also knew that Japanese tortoises lived for a thousand years. So he thought to himself, "Why should I kill it, when there are a lot of fish for me to eat?" So Urashima threw it back into the sea and went on fishing.

After he caught a lot of fish, he felt drowsy. So he lay down in his boat in the hot summer sun and fell asleep. Then a beautiful girl came up in the sea and got in the boat. Urashima woke up and looked at her.

"I am the daughter of the Sea God," she said, "and I live in the Dragon Palace in the sea. I was the tortoise you threw back, for my father sent me to see what you would do. Now my father has sent for you. If you love me, we will be married and live happily for a thousand years in the Dragon Palace."

1. Urashima Kuzumi was the .
- A. father of the Kuzumi family
  - B. only child of the Kuzumi family
  - C. youngest child of the Kuzumi family
  - D. beautiful daughter of the Kuzumi family
2. The word "drowsy" means .
- A. tired
  - B. sleepy
  - C. angry
  - D. sad
3. Urashima let the tortoise go because it .
- A. wasn't a fish
  - B. was too hard to eat
  - C. was too big to carry
  - D. had many years to live
4. The tortoise was caught by Urashima .
- A. by accident
  - B. because Urashima was a clever fisherman
  - C. as planned by the Sea God
  - D. because it was not very fast
5. The Sea God's daughter got in the boat, because she .
- A. was afraid of sea animals
  - B. was tired from swimming
  - C. wanted a ride back to the coast
  - D. wanted to thank Urashima for his kindness.

[D] 次の英文を読んで、設問に答えなさい。

When I visited my mother in the hospital, I could always see how hard the nurses were working. It was a very hot day and there was no air conditioning, which made everyone unhappy. One patient*, a girl about thirteen, seemed especially bad-tempered*.

She requested this and that almost as if she were trying to trouble the nurses. When she rang yet again, a nurse named Liz went over to her. After listening to the girl complain for a while, Liz asked, "Is this your first time in a hospital?"

"No, but ①the one I was in before was more wonderful than this one, and so were the nurses!" came the answer. "I still felt sorry for them, though. It's such a hard job."

Liz said, "So, you wouldn't want to be a nurse?"

"Are you crazy*? ( ② )"

"Well ... my father thought I was crazy when I first told him I wanted to be one," Liz answered. "He told me to go to commercial college, but I wanted to be a nurse, and went to nursing school secretly. A few months later, my father knew I didn't go to the commercial college."

Interested now, the girl said, "( ③ )"

"Of course, he got angry. I tried hard to explain it was noble* to look after people who need help, but he didn't seem to understand. He tried to stop me from going to nursing school, and then my father had a sudden heart attack*. When he got out of the hospital a few weeks later, he gave his great thanks to the kind and skilled nurses there.

④That's why he finally allowed me to follow my dream. Now here I am!"

"( ⑤ ) I mean, you run around serving food, cleaning up, dealing with difficult people ... like me," she said smiling for the first time.

"Well, it's true that it is not always just as I dreamed, especially on days like today, when I'm very tired from working overtime and trying to calm unhappy patients. But I still love being a nurse ... Anyhow, what was it that you wanted?"

"( ⑥ ) I can't reach my juice."

"Sure," Liz said, and handed a glass of juice to her.

I was moved at the way she had handled the situation and wanted to see whether it would stop the girl from being so demanding*. But when I came back a few days later, I found her bed empty, so I asked my mom why.

"She ⑦passed away last night. Something went wrong, and they were all doing everything they could, but didn't succeed.”

She also said that when the girl's parents came to pick up her things, the mother told Liz her daughter said she was the best nurse she met. ⑧She thanked ⑨her for taking the time to tell ⑩her her story and for making her last several days a bit brighter.

(注) patient : 患者                      bad-tempered : 不機嫌な                      crazy : 正気でない
noble : 素晴らしい                      heart attack : 心臓発作                      demanding : わがままな
